The invention must be useful.

The invention must be non-obvious.

According to one logical reasoning, any person who invents patentable technology is by default entitled to the patent rights in respect of that technology. After all, it was the inventor's imagination and ingenuity that created the product in the first place.

The term of every patent in India is 20 years from the date of filing the patent application, irrespective of whether it is filed with provisional or complete specification. However, in case of applications filed under the Patent Cooperative Treaty (PCT), the term of 20 years begins from the international filing date.

A one-day seminar on "Patent rights in India" at GIET School of Pharmacy

One-day seminar on "Patent rights in India" has been organized by IQAC Cell, GIET School of Pharmacy, Rajahmundry Andhra Pradesh on 30-11-2020 for PG and UG students.

Dr. I.V RAMARAO, Professor, NRI College of Pharmacy, Pothavarappadu acted as a chief guest & speaker and Dr MD Dhanaraju GIET School of Pharmacy was presiding over the inaugural function. The welcome address was delivered by Dr C Gopi.

The inaugural function was followed by the seminar on "Patent rights in India" presented by Mr. Dr. I.V Ramarao. He focuses on patent rights in India. He said that, the term of every patent in India is 20 years from the date of filing the patent application, irrespective of whether it is filed with provisional or complete specification. However, in case of applications filed under the Patent Cooperative Treaty (PCT), the term of 20 years begins from the international filing date. He also said that a patent owner has the right to decide who may – or may not – use the patented invention for the period in which the invention is protected. In other words, patent protection means that the invention cannot be commercially made, used, distributed, imported, or sold by others without the patent owner's consent.

ABOUT THE PROGRAMME

The electrocardiogram can be used to diagnose a wide variety of cardiac and non-cardiac conditions, abnormal heart rhythm, a heart defect, coronary artery disease, heart valve disease, or an enlarged heart. An electrocardiogram records the electrical signal from the heart to check for different heart conditions. Electrodes are placed on the chest to record the heart's electrical signals, which cause the heart to beat. The signals are shown as waves on an attached computer monitor or printer.

An ECG can help detect arrhythmias - where the heart beats too slowly, too quickly, or irregularly. Coronary heart disease - where the heart's blood supply is blocked or interrupted by a build-up of fatty substances.

Heart attacks - where the supply of blood to the heart is suddenly blocked.

The normal range of the ECG differed between men and women: heart rate 49 to 100 bpm vs. 55 to 108 bpm, P wave duration 81 to 130 ms vs. 84 to 130 ms, PR interval 119 to 210 ms vs. 120 to 202 ms, QRS duration 74 to 110 ms vs.

A one-day workshop on “Interpretation of ECG in heart diseases” at GIET School of Pharmacy

One-day Workshop on “Interpretation of ECG in heart diseases” has been organized by IQAC Cell, GIET School of Pharmacy, Rajahmundry Andhra Pradesh on 12-02-2021 for PG and UG students.

Mr. J John Kirubakaran, VIKAS Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Rajahmundry acted as a chief guest & speaker and Dr MD Dhanaraju GIET School of Pharmacy was presiding over the inaugural function. The welcome address was delivered by Dr R Vijayalakshmi.

The inaugural function was followed by the workshop on “Interpretation of ECG in heart diseases” presented by Mr. J John Kirubakaran. He focuses on Interpretation of ECG in different heart diseases. He starts with ECG, it is an electrocardiogram (ECG or EKG) records the electrical signal from the heart to check for different heart conditions. Electrodes are placed on the chest to record the heart's electrical signals, which cause the heart to beat. It is the most important test for interpretation of the cardiac rhythm, conduction system abnormalities, and the detection of myocardial ischemia. The ECG is also of great value in the evaluation of other types of cardiac abnormalities including valvular heart disease, cardiomyopathy, pericarditis, and hypertensive disease. Finally, the ECG can be used to monitor drug treatment (specifically antiarrhythmic therapy) and to detect metabolic disturbances.
